SAN FRANCISCO, CA – In San Francisco the 9th North American Infrastructure Leadership Forum presents the top 50 infrastructure projects deemed essential to help the global economy grow and create jobs. Among the participants, the former U.S. Secretary of Transportation Rodney Slater, who spoke of "Architecting the Future in the U.S.", underlying the urgent need of the U.S. to continue to invest in infrastructure, mainly transportation.

The Salini Impregilo Group presents its activities in the U.S., with Robert E. Alger, President and CEO of The Lane Construction Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of Salini Impregilo.

The event has been sponsored by Italian bank Intesa Sanpaolo who led a panel titled "Italian Excellence Growing Abroad in the Infrastructure Sector. Finance and Innovation to Optimize Performance and Support Challenging Projects" with the participation of the toll-road operator Atlantia too.

Lane presented the Salini Impregilo Group as the world leader in the water sector and a leading foreign contractor in the United States, with projects like the new Panama Canal, the I-4 Ultimate Project in Florida, the Lake Mead Intake 3 in Las Vegas, the Central Subway tunneling project in San Francisco, and the Cityringen Metro in Copenhagen.

The panel addressed the Group's achievements in innovative solutions to challenging projects as well as its commitment to sustainability and to follow the main projects to build smart cities.

The Forum gathered federal government representatives, multilateral development agencies, DOTs, local administrators, investors, and the biggest operators in the sector, with more than 350 specialized attendees for workshops, round tables, and private meetings.

About The Lane Construction Corporation

Founded in 1890, The Lane Construction Corporation is one of America's leading construction companies, specializing in heavy civil construction services and products in the transportation, infrastructure and energy industries.
